Actionable Suggestions for the resume: They could strengthen their Java skills by learning Spring Boot to align with the job description better. Expanding on their experience might help if they have more relevant work, perhaps adding projects or a publication in Java related areas. Their education is solid but not quite up-to-date with the latest tools like AWS or Docker, so I'd recommend updating that to match the current tech scene.

Putting this all together, the resume has some good points in keywords and experience but falls short on aligning with specific technical skills. Experience alone might be insufficient if it's too brief for a full-time position.

First, looking at Keyword Match. The job is specifically about Java developers, so the resume should highlight their Java skills. They have Spring Boot and AWS experience, which are related but not directly tied to Java. That might be a weakness because it doesn't fully align with the job description.

Next, Experience. They're a software engineer since they mention "Innovative software engineer." But the job specifically says Java developer. Even though they have Spring Boot, that's more of a Java-related tool than the core element expected for the position. Also, their experience is 7 months, which might be too short if the company is looking for longer term stability.

Education & Certifications Match is next. They have a B Tech in Computer Science and CGPA mentioned, so that's good alignment with the Java title. However, I noticed they listed "CGPA" which should probably be "CGPA," but it's still correct as it stands. There are no other relevant certifications or degrees listed beyond their technical education.
